Social and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Cox, of Johnson City, Tenn., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, to Hunter Mann, of Richmond, the wedding to take place on Wednesday, October 1. The announcement is of the greatest interest to society in this city and throughout the State, where both Mr. Mann and his bride-elect are widely and prominently related. Miss Cox is a lovely girl, and her father is a well-known lawyer of Tennessee. Mr. Mann is a son of the late Judge and Mrs. Edwin Murray Mann, of Petersburg, and is a nephew of William Hodges Mann, Governor of Virginia. He is also a brother of Dr. Herbert Mann, of Richmond. Following a wedding journey, Mr. Mann and his bride will sail for China, where the former holds a position with the British American Tobacco Company.

Owing to the social prominence of the bride and groom-elect, the engagement is one of the most interesting announcements this summer, and their wedding this fall will be one of the leading events of the early season, many well-known and distinguished guests going from Richmond to attend the ceremony.

Cotillon at the White.
Society in Richmond is interested in the cotillon that will take place at the Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs this evening at 9 o'clock, since a number of invitations have been received in the names of some of the most prominent society men of this State and others, who are spending this season at the White, and include Thomas B. Paine, Colonel John Lane, Henry W. Anderson, John Alken, Branch, Garrett B. Wall, all of Richmond; Douglas Manley, John H. French, Billups Phinizy, of Georgia; Snowden Marshall and Marion Whaley. It will be one of the most brilliant of the summer season, and that famous resort, and fashionable society in large numbers will through the historic old ballroom of the White for the occasion.

Mr. Mann Returns.
Mr. William Hodges Mann has returned to the executive mansion, after a short stay with relatives and friends in Nottingham County. Mrs. Mann also visited her sister, Mrs. Patrick Hamilton, at her home in Petersburg.

Leaving Town.
Miss Anne Keith Royall was the guest of relatives in Richmond Saturday, en route to Warren and where she will visit Mrs. Page, formerly Miss Dudley Powers, at her country home there. Miss Royall has recently been the guest of Mrs. Lewis Cutchins, of this city, in Cumberland. Miss Emily Ruth, of Bedford Royall is camping with a party of friends entertained by Miss Lucy Turner, near her home in Fauquier County.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Richardson left Saturday night for a visit to Cincinnati, Ohio; Nashville, Tenn., and other places of interest in the South and West. While in Nashville, Mr. Richardson will attend the annual meeting of the American Pharmaceutical Association. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson will also visit the former's uncle, Judge R. N. Richardson, at his home in Franklin, Tenn.

At the Beach.
Miss Stella Blanchette Barrow is the guest of Mrs. Maud St. George at Wrightsville Beach, near Wilmington.

Misses Agnes and Katie Burgess, of this city, are visiting Mrs. J. G. Fearman in Roanoke.

Miss Bette S. Johnston, of Richmond, is the guest of her brother, Captain C. F. Johnston, in Gordonsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blanton, of this city, have been recent guests of Dr. and Mrs. S. C. Hatcher in Ashland.

Mrs. Staunton I. Cottrell and little daughter, Miss Elsie Gray and Elizabeth, who have been spending some time in Roanoke, Va., with Mrs. W. H. Hudnall, have gone to Falling Waters, West Va., to visit Mrs. Jebb Russell. On the homeward trip they will stop at Luray Cave, Va., for a few days.

Miss Margaret G. Kirkham left last night on an extended visit to Hot Springs, Va., and Chicago. She will be gone about six weeks.

NEWS OF EASTERN SHORE

Onancock, Va., August 17.—There never was as much money on the Eastern Shore as at present. The Eastern Shore of Virginia Produce Exchange has already done a business of $2,300,000 with the sweet potato and corn crop exchange for 1912, the banner year, was about $1,750,000. The outlook for sweet potatoes is excellent on account of the scarcity of fruit. The yield is good.

A law and order league has been organized at Onley, with fifty-four members. Dr. John Kellam was elected president and W. F. White, secretary. The object of the league is to break up the illicit sale of whiskey, also to break up the promiscuous shooting of guns and pistols. B. T. Parkes, L. J. Savage

TWO WAYS TO COMPETE IN THE BOOKLOVERS' CONTEST

One Way: Use Only Pictures and Coupons. Another: Use the Answer Book.

Once in a while some one ambitious to win a capital prize in the Booklovers' Contest Game wants to know the "best way to compete." Well, there are two ways to compete, either of which may lead to one of the $1,200 in prizes.

One way is to use only the contest pictures and coupons. Seventy-seven of these—comprising the entire contest series—will appear in this paper. Each picture will draw to represent the title of a book, and each picture represents one book title and only one.

But the contest rules permit each contestant to make as many as ten different answers to each picture, if he so desires. It is stipulated, however, that each answer submitted in this contest must be submitted in a separate picture and coupon. If you make four answers to picture No. 19, for instance, you must secure four copies of picture No. 19, and submit each answer on a separate picture and coupon.

There is, however, a way to submit several answers to each picture, if you desire, and yet require only one copy of each picture. You can do this if you have an answer book. This book contains twenty-seven double pages. On the top sections of the seventy-seven pages you paste the seventy-seven pictures. On the bottom sections you write down your answers or answers to each picture.

With an answer book then, you may make the limit of ten different answers to each picture (770 answers in all), and yet need only one copy of each picture. If you made ten answers to each picture, and did not have an answer book, you would have to secure 770 pictures, both of each picture, on which to submit these answers.

In two more days the answer book will be offered to contestants. It is neat, compact, easily carried around. If you have an answer book you are through with the necessity of pursuing scattered pictures and coupons around the house. With the pictures safely and neatly pasted in the answer book nothing can happen to them.

But the chief merit of the answer book lies in the fact that it requires you to get only one copy of each picture, even though you make as many as ten different answers to each picture.

If you want to start playing this contest game now, get the book pictured free. The answer book No. 73 is published. Well, you can get all the pictures that have been published thus far, free, with a catalogue.

The catalogue is a list of 5,000 book titles, arranged in alphabetical order. The seventy-seven book titles to be represented by the seventy-seven pictures were, first of all, selected from this list of 5,000 titles. In other words, all the seventy-seven correct titles are contained in the catalogue, or, to put it another way, seventy-seven of the 5,000 titles are guaranteed to be the seventy-seven book titles that the seventy-seven pictures represent.

The catalogue costs 25 cents, or 40 cents by mail. With each catalogue you are given, free, seven certificates, each of which is good for a certain number of the first thirty-five pictures. All the seven certificates together are good for the first thirty-five pictures. But to date only the first four certificates, which are good for the first twenty pictures, are redeemable. After picture No. 25 has appeared certificate No. 5 will become redeemable for the pictures from twenty-one to twenty-five, inclusive. And so for the sixth certificate, which will become redeemable for pictures twenty-six and thirty, and certificate No. 7, which will be good for pictures 31 to 35.

There is unusually large crop of figs this season. The fruit is as large as a Sicilian pear, and very sweet.

The Central Agricultural Fair (colored) will begin at Tasley Tuesday, and continue four days. On account of the smallpox scare in Carter, Northampton, it was thought at one time that the fair would not be held. The smallpox is confined entirely to colored people, and the board of health has ordered compulsory vaccination from Eastville to the Point. It was brought here by men who came from across the bay to pick up potatoes. As the white people had held the Tasley Fair, and will hold the Keller Fair, week after next, the supervisors did not see their way clear to stop the fair. The attendance on some days in the past has been 8,000 people. Excursions are run from Delaware to Norfolk.

The twenty-first meeting of the Accomac Baptist Church Wednesday and Thursday. The following officers were re-elected: J. E. Nottingham, Jr., moderator; Rev. W. Thurnham Clarke, vicar; W. F. White, clerk; H. R. Boggs, treasurer. Rev. W. Thurnham Clarke preached the annual sermon, Thursday, 266 persons accepted of the hospitality of the women of the church, when a good old Eastern Shore dinner was served.

A telegram was received here Wednesday announcing the death of Isaiah Justis at his home in Baltimore. Mr. Justis was a native of Accomac and has already done a business of $2,300,000 with the sweet potato and corn crop exchange for 1912, the banner year, was about $1,750,000. The outlook for sweet potatoes is excellent on account of the scarcity of fruit. The yield is good.

Charles Coard, of Greenbush, is dead, aged fifty-one years. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Frank Ayres, at his home in Greenbush. Interment was in the Parkside Cemetery. His widow and three children—Mrs. George Coard, Miss Margaret Coard and Edward Coard—survive.

Miss Beulah Young, daughter of R. J. Young, and Oscar Hancock were married at the bride's home at Oak Hall, Rev. Y. E. Johnson officiating.

CHANGE IS RADICAL IN FOREIGN POLICY

Court Influences at Bucharest No Longer Dominate Roumanian Government.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.

COURT influences at Bucharest have ceased to dominate the foreign policy of Roumania, which until the other day was so pronouncedly Austrophile as to convince everybody that King Charles was an ally of Emperor Francis Joseph, and an additional member of the so-called triple alliance. Popular sentiment, voiced by the national legislature and by the cabinet, has secured the mastery, and has forced its views upon the King and his court. They are views which are distinctly hostile to Austria, and as such radical change of the foreign policy of Roumania cannot fail to have a very important effect upon the future course of events in the southeast of Europe, it is well to take note thereof.

To begin with, the Roumanian government has taken no account whatsoever of the protests of Emperor Francis Joseph against the humiliating terms imposed upon King Ferdinand by the treaty of Bucharest. The intervention of the Emperor in behalf of Ferdinand has been the subject of much official and popular resentment in Bucharest, and has served as a pretext for the denunciation of the oppression and alleged persecution to which the 3,000,000 of Roumanians in the Hungarian province of Transylvania are subjected by the Emperor's Magyar government.

That is to say, in indifference to the feelings of the dual empire, the Roumanian government has just added to its army three regiments of infantry recruited from Roumanians in Transylvania—that is to say, of subjects of Emperor Francis Joseph who have been weaned from their allegiance to him.

That Emperor William should have given encouragement to Roumanian in her new foreign policy, and that he has expressed his enthusiastic approval of the treaty of Bucharest, has created a most unpleasant impression in Berlin, where the relations with Roumania have been friendly and amicable at any time since the formation of the triple alliance.

Sir Walter Strickland, of Boynton Hall, in Yorkshire, who has been missing so strangely ever since the 1st of December last, and for whom a worldwide search was instituted, without success, has been found by his half-brothers, Frederick and Henry, suddenly turned up last week in Geneva, Switzerland, as mysteriously as he disappeared. It remains to be seen whether he will remain in Geneva, or whether he is extremely reticent. It is quite possible that he has been in jail all the time, for, sixty-six years of age and a scholar, he is something of an anarchist, and has spent the last thirty years wandering all over the world, botanizing, translating Horace and Moliere, writing violent pamphlets and verses against the established order of things in his native land and in the countries that he visited, and getting into all sorts of trouble with various civilized governments.

Sir Walter is an extraordinary character, a brilliant man—in many senses of the word a gypsy—and suggested to Maurice Hewlett the principal figure, "The Gypsy," in his latest novel, "The Gypsy." Sir Walter's father, Sir John Strickland, was a famous family lawyer, and his grandfather, Sir Thomas Strickland, bore the banner of St. George at the battle of Agincourt, and a Walter Strickland played the part of Oliver Cromwell, who called him to "the other house of Parliament" as Lord Strickland, a title, however, which was not recognized or confirmed after the Restoration by Charles II. Agnes Strickland, the authoress, and Sir Gerald Strickland, Governor of New South Wales, figure on the roster of this ancient family, which for nearly a thousand years has borne as its crest a bird which is described in old heraldic phraseology as "a turkey vulture in its pride"—a house settled in Ireland and Yorkshire long before the Norman Conquest.

Lewis Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Colonies in the Asquith administration, and through marriage a nephew of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, might have been President of Venezuela to-day had it not been for what he was pleased to describe in the House of Commons the other day as the fastidiousness of one of his ancestors. The latter secured from James I. a royal grant of all the land in North America now known as Venezuela, and sailed from Bristol to take possession thereof. He had shipped his consumption of ale on board for the voyage, and during the voyage he found out he had found that for some reason or other the ale had gone long. A second and third barrel, on being tapped, proved equally unsatisfactory. Sooner than bear the reduced price of ale, or worse still, mere water during his voyage to South America, he turned back in order to obtain a fresh supply of beer of more certain quality. He died shortly after reaching Bristol, and his heirs allowed the concession to lapse, being unwilling to undertake the risk of the venture.

The tiny republic of San Marino, with its thirty-two square miles of area, is the oldest republic in the world, its existence for over 1,000 years—has come involved in a full-fledged war with the holy seat. It provoked hostility by enacting a law recently confiscating all ecclesiastical property within its borders, in defiance of the stipulations of its treaty and concordat with the papacy. The latter has declared the republic in breach of the laws, and has threatened the members of the San Marino government with excommunication and the entire territory of the republic with pontifical ban and interdict. The Italian government is made to enforce the spoliation laws.

The fact of the matter is that the small republic is in financial difficulties, having been deprived, by the protest of the Italian government of its principal sources of revenue, namely, the lottery, and the sale of titles of nobility and of orders of knighthood. The sale of these titles was, until a few years ago, carried on openly, and liberally and avowedly, the duties on sale comprising everything from dukedoms and principedoms down to military knighthoods and decorations. San Marino was then on the verge of ruin, and was threatened with a fixed tariff rate for each title, and there are a large number of individuals, in the northern and southern portions of this hemisphere, who are parading around with nobiliary honors obtained by means of purchase from the republic.

The revenue thus obtained was very large, and a portion of it was devoted to the maintenance of the local hospital, home for the destitute aged, and a school for the orphaned. The gates being to the effect of an offering of "human vanity to human weakness."

According to tradition, the republic was founded by Saint Marinus during the persecution of the Christians under Emperor Diocletian. The monastery of San Marino dates back to the seventh century, and in the dungeons of the castle the famous Italian patriot, Gagliostro, breathed his last in 1795.

DANVILLE MAY BID FOR NEXT MEETING

Delegates Appointed to Attend State Firemen's Convention at Staunton.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Danville, Va., August 17.—Ten delegates of the local Fire Department will attend the State Firemen's Convention, which will meet at Staunton on August 27. It will be the largest delegation that has ever been sent to the annual reunion of State firefighters, and it is rumored that a strenuous effort will be made to bring the text convention to Danville. The council, according to its annual custom, has appropriated $50 towards the fund raised to defray the men's expenses. By private subscription it is expected that nearly $300 will be raised to see the firemen through their three-day holiday.

Preparations are in full swing now for the Danville Fair, which will be held here October 15-18, and the prospect is in touch personally with the successful exhibition. A systematic tour of the surrounding counties is being made by a representative, who is getting in touch personally with the farmers, and who is also advertising the event on a large scale along the highways and byways of near-by counties.

The cattle exhibits will certainly be better than they have ever been before, and several fine beasts will be brought here for exhibition. The State Boys' and Girls' Poultry Club will this year have an exhibit, space already having been allotted to the organization. More concessions than ever before booked for the local event have already signed contracts, and there will be a noticeable increase in revenue realized from this quarter. An aviator will daily give an exhibition of flights from the grounds in a Wright aeroplane, and this feature, it is expected, will prove a drawing card to the public. There will be three other free attractions and a fireworks display will be given each night. All of the exhibition halls are ready for occupancy. The merchants' building, which was damaged to the extent of $800 several months ago, when a severe storm passed over the city, has been entirely renovated. In view of the nearly general state of the fair, it is more than probable that new grounds will be selected and secured for the 1914 event.

Fire at 7 o'clock on Saturday morning practically ruined the contents of the frame dwelling occupied by C. S. Sader, on Colquhoun Street. A kerosene cooking stove in the kitchen exploded and the flames spread rapidly to adjoining rooms before the Fire Department arrived. What was not damaged by fire and smoke suffered a water. No insurance was carried on the furniture. The building was damaged to the extent of $150, covered by insurance.

The Southern Railway Company was ordered to pay a fine of $5 in the Mayor's Court on Friday, following a warrant issued by Chief of Police Bell, charging certain employees of the line with being a nuisance. Frequent complaints have been voiced by residents in the vicinity of Lee Street crossing the line, that the unnecessary whistling of locomotives, what they approach the spot. The time limit for a blast on an engine whistle is ten seconds, and a freight engine, the engineer of which blew loud and long, was the cause for the warrant.
